Kingsford to Centennial Park Walking and Cycling Improvements

Project Update

Transport for NSW | December 2022

The Australian and NSW Governments are delivering walking and cycling improvements to provide an active transport link between Kingsford and Centennial Park.

The project, developed by Randwick City Council and being delivered by Transport for NSW, is part of a $240 million investment by the Australian and NSW Governments to fix congestion hotspots, expand the cycling network and help the economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic.

Community Benefits

It includes a 2.8km two-way cycleway and shared path improvements along Doncaster Avenue, Day Avenue, Houston Road, General Bridges Crescent and Sturt Street.

These improvements will provide the local community and commuters a safe and convenient active transport option. The project will:

- improve pedestrian and road user safety with new crossings, upgraded paths and traffic calming measures
- improve accessibility for wheelchairs and prams
- improve bike rider safety with a new two-way 2.8 km separated cycleway
- improve streetscape with new trees, plants and landscaping
- provide places to sit and enjoy the surrounds
- provide more bike parking
- improve street lighting for safety and security
- improve stormwater drainage to address flooding of properties and roads

Work to date

Investigation work and construction commenced in March 2022. In the last four months we have made substantial progress after significant rain impacts earlier in the year.

Construction work is almost complete on about 950m of the new footpath and cycleway on Doncaster Ave between Anzac Pde and Alison Rd. Work in this area included upgrading new traffic intersections, installing new driveways, relocating power poles and constructing new kerb, guttering and footpaths.

Work has commenced on Doncaster Ave between Anzac Pde and Koorinda Ave, which involves removing and reconstructing existing footpaths, kerbs, gutters and driveways.

We have also commenced installation of new stormwater drainage along Day Ave near Doncaster Ave.

Update on tree consultation

Randwick City Council consulted on tree replacement plans in August 2022 and are working through the responses to determine tree planting locations. The locations will be based on community feedback along with site constraints and their Tree Masterplan.

An update on the consultation and the tree planting locations will be available on the Council website in early 2023. Thank you to everyone who provided feedback.
