

Transport Visiting Fellowship Program

transport.nsw.gov.au

April 2022

Are you a soon-to-be or recent PhD graduate?
Do you have specialist skills or experience that could be of value to solving Transport's most complex problems?

The Transport Visiting Fellowship program gives you the opportunity to gain industry work experience, using your research talents in areas where Transport has skills gaps. Help us deliver on our strategic objectives through short-term practical research projects.

Questions?

Contact Emma Koh at
research@transport.nsw.gov.au.

What is it?

The Transport Visiting Fellowship program is a short-term talent placement program that recruits PhD graduates on a temporary basis. The paid program is designed to foster a talent pipeline of specialists to build capability within Transport, addressing future skills gaps, particularly in new and emerging areas of work.

What is involved?

Projects vary but you will be required to:

- undertake applied research matched to your specialist skills in areas such as technology and innovation analytics, engineering, business, and economics
- work autonomously and in small teams to help in project coordination
- contribute to project deliverables with little supervision
- work flexibly and manage your time.

Projects will provide a mix of three and six month placements, including both full-time and part-time opportunities. Salary range varies.

How do you apply?

To be involved, review the scope of services on our website and prepare a response to the selection criteria. Forward your response to the selection criteria and your CV to research@transport.nsw.gov.au.
